THE HISTORY

The history of tea is long and rich, with its origins in China. The first recorded use of tea as a beverage dates back to the 3rd century BC, when it was used as a medicinal drink. The tea trade flourished during the Silk Road era, and tea became a popular beverage in Europe in the 17th century. The tea industry in China has since grown into a major economic sector, with tea production and consumption continuing to rise globally.

In the 17th century, Chinese tea was introduced to Europe by missionaries and traders. The British East India Company played a significant role in the tea trade, and tea became a staple of the British diet. The tea industry in China has since grown into a major economic sector, with tea production and consumption continuing to rise globally.
